The trochlear nerve, also called the fourth cranial nerve or CN IV, is a motor nerve (a somatic efferent nerve) that innervates only a single muscle: the superior oblique muscle of the eye, which operates through the pulley-like trochlea. The trochlear nerve is unique among the cranial nerves in several respects: It is the smallest nerve in terms of the number of axons it contains.

The facial nerve is the seventh cranial nerve, or simply CN VII. It emerges from the pons of the brainstem, controls the muscles of facial expression, and functions in the conveyance of taste sensations from the anterior two-thirds of the tongue. The nerves typically travel from the pons through the facial canal in the temporal bone and exit the skull at the stylomastoid foramen.

IN DEPTH: Syringomyelia (SM -- also known as syrinx and hydromyelia, and occasionally mis-identified as Arnold Chiari malformation) is a condition of the development of fluid-filled cavities in the spinal cord, which is believed by researchers to be due to abnormal flow of cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) between the brain and the spinal cord through the foramen magnum at the base of the skull.
